

Too many cooks and no recipe

Re: "Region needs transport plan," editorial, Oct. 18.

The City of Victoria wants to restrict parking. Those coming from other parts of the region complain. Some say: "Bravo, Victoria." This is short-sighted.

Ensuring mobility is a task that should have a regional focus. The city is a small part of a large region in which "planning" is beset by too many cooks and no recipe. The net effect of this jumble is to obstruct rather than promote mobility.

The capital region is a metropolis of more than 350,000. It lacks effective regional governance. Is there not a better way to run its affairs? Ask your MLA.

John Olson

Colwood